The annual year-end faculty and staff party was held imposingly at the Student Activity Center on January 16, 2004 prior to the Chinese Lunar New Year. The party was initiated by a Chinese classical song and dance by the College of liberal Arts. Removing their serious appearance in ordinary days, Dean Kao Po-yuan and staffs of College of Liberal Arts wore Chinese ancient costume, beat drums and struck gongs, and danced cheerfully to the Chinese song “Feng Yang Hua Ku” .

This year, the faculty and staff party provided with seven programs which were hosted by Lee Mei-hui, Chair of Dept. of Mass Communication, and He Yung-cheng , Associate Professor of Dept. of History. With their silver tongue and witty talks, they made all the colleagues laugh happily from the beginning to the end. In addition, Chou Tsung-hsien, a professor in the Dept. of History, directed all the people singing a famous Taiwanese old song “Looking forward to the Wind of Spring” , which reveals the true affection of a young girl. Instructor Chi Hui-chun (Dept. of Mass Communication) sang the touching folk song “Tender as You Are” in the party, giving the party a soft and tender feeling. At last, three ex-deans of College of Liberal Arts including Chen Ya-hung, Fu Hsi-jen, and Huang Shih-hsiung sang a Japanese song together and the present dean Kao Po-yuan sang an English old song “The Last Waltz” .
